County OKs $115K for West Bridge survey

BY BOB DEMAREE

Projects are moving forward at the Jefferson County Highway Department, including a proposal to replace a bridge on West Street at the foot of Michigan Road hill in downtown Madison.

County Highway Superintendent Bobby Phillips noted the county rates all of its bridges to determines which ones have the most structural problems. He said the West Street bridge is “showing distress” the most due to deterioration on the top portion of the span.

Phillips said Jefferson County Highway Department is responsible for all bridges in the county that are more than 20 feet in length and explained that is why the county will replace West Street bridge, know as Bridge 6 on the county’s bridge inventory, even though it is located within the city limits of Madison.

Jefferson County Commissioners approved a $115,600 contract with SJCA Inc., of Indianapolis, for engineering work for the superstructure replacement of the bridge, which includes surveying and hydraulics, roadway bridge design and other aspects of the engineering to prepare for the project. Phillips said money for the engineering work will come from the county’s cumulative bridge fund.

The Commissioners also approved two agreements with FPBH Inc., of North Vernon, to put together all the design work and bid documents for upcoming county asphalt paving projects. Two separate contracts were necessary with FPBH Inc. — one for the Community Crossings component and the other for local projects — with the Community Crossings work not to exceed $24,800 and the local projects not to exceed $7,600.

Phillips said he is hopeful the county will see some cost savings on the projects.

“I’m hoping contractors will be more aggressive for larger projects while they are in the area,” he said, noting there is a greater amount for engineering work through the Community Crossings since the county received a $1 million allocation of which the county must match 25%.

“That goes a long, long way,” he said.

The Commissioners also finalized paperwork by getting their signatures for an engineering contract with United Consulting Engineers of Indianapolis for replacement of Bridge 107 on Suga Hollow Road. The county had received a grant from the Federal Highway Administration through the Indiana Department of Transportation for that project.

Meanwhile, Phillips received and opened all sealed bids for 2022 supplies for the highway department and announced the cost of each. The Commissioners accepted the bids, which Phillips said are used to secure pricing for the entire year for chip seal products, diesel fuel, vegetation control, rock, stone, culverts, dust control and more.

Elsewhere, Phillips said highway employees received their snow plow training on Thursday from Steve Moriarty, county highway superintendent from Kosciusko County in northern Indiana.

“They move a lot of snow up there,” Phillips said of Kosciusko County. He said the training was good as the county highway department prepares for winter.

In other business:

- Commissioner David Bramer provided an update on progress toward finalizing a water provider for the new Jefferson County Sheriff’s Office and Criminal Justice Center due to be completed in 2023. He said he attended the Dupont Water Company meeting Monday, where he was told that since Dupont buys its water from Madison they are waiting on the City of Madison to finish its rate study to know what their rates will be.

“They said they could give us a number but unfortunately that number would be subject to change,” Bramer said. “We’re still working through that. It’s not the answer everyone was looking for, but it clears up why there’s been such a delay.”

Bramer said that Dupont doesn’t currently have any other customers who use the volume of water that will be needed

Jefferson County Commissioners approved a $115,600 contract for engineering services related to the West Street bridge over Crooked Creek in downtown Madison. The bridge ranks structurally as one of the worst in the county’s system and surveying and engineering a replacement is one step in replacing that span (pictured) at some point. Meanwhile, the City of Madison has approved $25,000 in flood mediation work to clear the trees and overgrowth (also pictured) along and in the Crooked Creek channel from Jefferson Street to West Street.

PROGRESS SHOWING

Workers were busy replacing the roof on the former Victoria Inn, 801 East Main Street, this week as part of a renovation and rebuild that will convert the 1890 structure — once a 26-room hotel but more recently a dilapidated residence inn — into 14 apartments on the top two floors and a golf cart rental business in the basement. Owner/developer McGill Holdings has gutted the building and plans a new interior and new exterior siding, windows and doors.

Trimble COVID-19 death toll climbs to 19

BY THE COURIER STAFF

The COVID-19 death toll in Trimble County has climbed by one since the Kentucky Department of Public Health’s previously reporting.

Trimble, one of the smallest counties in Kentucky with 8,477 residents, has now recorded 19 deaths during the pandemic out of 1,295 total positive cases.

The death was actually the second this week for Trimble County while death totals in other local counties remained the same with 102 in Jefferson County Indiana, 29 in Carroll County Kentucky and 12 in Switzerland County Indiana.

Both Trimble and Carroll remain in the “Red” metric for incidence rates indicating high virus spread. Over the last two days, Trimble has had nine new COVID-19 cases while Carroll has recorded 14 to push its total to 1,997. Trimble’s positivity rate is 10.84% while Carroll’s is 5.71%.

Meanwhile, Jefferson County remains in the “Orange” metric for moderate to high spread while Switzerland County is “Yellow” for moderate spread. Jefferson County has reported 46 new positive cases of COVID-19 in the last two days, bringing its total to 5,516 with a positivity rate of 13%. Switzerland County had 15 new cases in the last two days, increasing its total to 1,421 and a 6.3% positivity rate.

Hong Kong Kitchen awarded state historic preservation grant

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Indiana Lt. Gov. Suzanne Crouch and the Indiana Office of Community and Rural Affairs announced Thursday that 11 properties have been awarded $712,989 in funding through the state’s Historic Renovation Grant Program including funding for historic preservation of the Hong Kong Kitchen in downtown Madison.

Hong Kong Kitchen, 102 East Main Street, was awarded $27,840 to help repair historic wood windows at the three-story, 19th century, brick Italianate structure that has served as a business and home for owners Yu Jiang and Zu Tian Zhang and their children for almost 20 years.

The funds will also help install exterior storm windows to preserve the original windows and prolong their life. The grant funding will partially pay for the labor of the window restoration expert and any required materials for restoration.

In awarding the competitive grant, the state noted that the successful restaurant, located at the corner of Main and West

Churchill Downs Inc. picked for Terre Haute casino

BY TOM DAVIES
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — The company that runs the Kentucky Derby has been picked to take over the stalled project to build a casino in the western Indiana city of Terre Haute.

Indiana Gaming Commission members voted Wednesday in favor of Louisville, Kentucky-based Churchill Downs Inc. over three other companies that submitted proposals.

Churchill Downs' selection comes after the Terre Haute project was derailed amid an investigation into allegations of criminal and financial misconduct against top executives in an ownership group that was originally awarded the casino license in 2019.

Churchill Downs said it plans a $240 million project to build a new casino, along with a 10-story, 125-room hotel with a rooftop lounge. The company expects to open the casino within 16 months on property south of the Interstate 70-U.S. 41 interchange. Executives said they could also consider sites near I-70 on the city's east side.

CEO Bill Carstanjen told the state commission that Churchill Downs was not pursuing multiple projects or already running casinos elsewhere in Indiana like the other applicants.

"This is a market that we've been after for a while," Carstanjen said. "We're going to be absolutely focused on going to the maximum extent we can."

The other applicants included Hard Rock International, which had an agreement to operate a $125 million casino in Terre Haute before the state commission voted in June against renewing the casino license because the ownership group hadn't hired an executive team or secured full financing after more than a year. Florida-based Hard Rock in August took over ownership of a new $300 million casino in Gary from Indianapolis-based Spectacle Entertainment, the company entangled in the misconduct investigation.

The state commission selected Churchill Downs even though the previous Terre Haute casino group is fighting the loss of its license. The commission is in settlement negotiations with that group ahead of a scheduled Dec. 3 hearing before an administrative law judge.

Besides its namesake horse track in Louisville and pari-mutuel facilities in Kentucky, Churchill Downs operates 10 casinos in eight states.

The Terre Haute project will become Indiana's 13th casino location, with the city becoming the state's first new community to get a casino since 2008.

Gaming commission Executive Director Greg Small said it was important to get the new casino built.

"This project has been pending for too long and too little has been done to fully capture the benefits to the state or local community," Small said.

The Terre Haute project has faced turmoil since early 2020 when state casino officials began investigating Spectacle Entertainment and then-CEO Rod Ratcliff after the filing of federal charges of illegal political campaign contributions involving a longtime Ratcliff business partner, former Spectacle vice president John Keeler.

State officials forced Spectacle last year to give up ownership of that project to Terre Haute businessman Greg Gibson, but his efforts to open the casino stalled.

Ratcliff has denied wrongdoing and hasn't been charged by federal authorities in the campaign financing case. Keeler is awaiting trial on the charges.

Renewed push for marijuana in Indiana faces GOP opposition

BY TOM DAVIES
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — A renewed push for Indiana to join more than two-thirds of states with some form of legalized marijuana use appears to face the same roadblock from Statehouse Republicans who have opposed such a step for many years.

Legislative Democrats and the state Democratic Party united this week urging approval of marijuana legalization during the legislative session that starts in January, arguing that it could benefit those wanting to use it for medical purposes, create new jobs and become an additional state tax revenue source.

The Republican-dominated Legislature has not taken any action on bills submitted over the past decade for allowing medical marijuana or removing criminal penalties for possessing small amounts of the drug, even as recreational marijuana sales have won approval in Michigan and Illinois and medical use is allowed in Ohio.

Legalization advocates haven't yet changed the minds of legislative leaders, who reject arguments that Indiana is losing money to neighboring states and point to pot still being illegal under federal law.

"I think when you make the argument about having that substantial a public policy change just because you're trying to chase dollars makes no sense to me, so I'm in the same place I've been" Republican House Speaker Todd Huston said.

Support for marijuana legalization has grown across the country, underscoring a national shift as more states have legalized it for medical or recreational use.

A Gallup survey conducted earlier this year found more than two in three Americans supported legalizing marijuana, maintaining a record-high reached a year earlier. A 2018 survey by Ball State University's Bowen Center for Public Affairs found about 80% of Indiana adults favor medical marijuana use and 40% are supportive of legal recreational use, with just 16% backing the state's current total ban.

According to the National Conference of State Legislatures, 36 states allow medical cannabis use, while 18 states and the District of Columbia allow nonmedical, adult use.

Indiana Democratic Chairman Mike Schmuhl said Republicans were losing their "economic common sense" by opposing legalization steps, potentially leaving the state without any way of overseeing marijuana businesses if legalized by the federal government.

"Hoosiers have seen the impact that recreational and medicinal cannabis use has made on the states around us and not only are they contributing to neighboring states' economies, Indiana is now on the verge of losing out altogether," Schmuhl said.

Republican Gov. Eric Holcomb has long maintained that he will oppose any legalization as long as the federal government classifies marijuana as a dangerous drug. Holcomb spokeswoman Erin Murphy said this week "at this point nothing has changed."

The 2020 Democratic candidates for governor and state attorney general both embraced some form of marijuana legalization, but the issue didn't gain much attention during their unsuccessful campaigns.

Democratic Hammond Mayor Thomas McDermott Jr., who is seeking to challenge Republican U.S. Sen. Todd Young in next year's election, pledged to would work toward legalizing marijuana nationwide as he acknowledged earlier this month to smoking pot at two recent Grateful Dead concerts in Chicago.

Republican state Senate Majority Leader Mark Messmer of Jasper points to issues such as banks shunning money from the cannabis industry, fearing it could expose them to legal trouble under federal laws.

"It's an issue that does poll well with the public but there's still conflicting federal statutes that make it a little difficult to bring forward," Messmer said.

Barbara Ann Bliton Lock, 72, of Vevay, Indiana, died Wednesday, Nov. 17, 2021, at King's Daughters' Hospital in Madison, Indiana.

She was born on Nov. 3, 1949, in Milan, Indiana, to Faye Wesley “Dude” and Dorothy L. Pelsor Bliton. She was raised in Canaan, Indiana, and was a 1967 graduate of Madison Consolidated High School. She received her business degree in 1969 from Ivy Tech Community College in Madison, and was employed for Randall's Textron in Vevay for two years where she met and married Larry Gene “Zero” Lock on Feb. 22, 1969, in Madison. She was employed for US Shoe Factory in Vevay for more than 20 years, was a host for tourists at Grand Victoria Casino & Resort in Rising Sun, Indiana, for five years and was a night auditor for Fairway Inn in Florence, Indiana, for eight years. She enjoyed spending time with her grandchildren, playing video games with her friends on the computer and especially enjoyed writing poems, crocheting and cooking, as well as shopping, quilting and sewing.

Survivors include her daughters, Sandra Denise “Sandy” Hankins of Erlanger, Kentucky and Beverly Ann Stivers of Patriot, Indiana; two brothers, Gary Hanley of New York and Bill Bliton of Texas; and nine grandchildren, five great grandchildren and several nieces, nephews and cousins.

She was preceded in death by her parents; her husband of 41 years on Feb. 13, 2010; two brothers, Daniel Ardell Bliton and Garnett O. Bliton; and a sister, Sheila Bliton Morris.

Funeral services will be at 1 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 23, at the Haskell & Morrison Funeral Home in Vevay. Interment will follow in the Vevay Cemetery there. Visitation is 11 a.m. until the time of services Tuesday at the funeral home.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Barbara and Larry Lock Monument Fund through the funeral home. Online condolences and memorials, www.haskellandmorrison.com.

Let Us Pause To Honor The Memory Of

Mrs. Margaret Jean "Marg" McDole Imel

Mrs. Margaret Jean "Marg" McDole Imel, age 90, of Madison, Indiana entered this life on November 10, 1931 in Trimble County, Kentucky. She was the loving daughter of the late Jerry and Margaret "Maggie" Alice Marshall McDole. She grew up in Trimble County and graduated from Trimble County High School in 1951. On February 13, 1954, she was united in marriage to the late Dallas Howard Imel in Canaan, Indiana, and they moved to Jefferson County in 1955. Margaret retired from Conn Organ after 19 years of service as an assembler/adjuster of key board systems. She had previously, worked at U. S. Shoe Corporation for eight years as a stamper and cutter. She also worked along-side her husband on the farm that they loved. They raised Tobacco, cattle and hay for many years. She was a member of the former Brooksbury United Methodist Church and the Major Samuel Woodfill Post No. 9 of the American Legion Auxiliary. Margaret enjoyed crocheting, gardening, feeding the birds and feeding the squirrels and loved her dogs. She enjoyed her pet goat, J.J. that she raised. Margaret died on Monday, November 15, 2021, at 6:06 p.m. at the King's Daughters' Hospital in Madison, Indiana.

A LOVING FAMILY

Margaret will be missed by her caregivers and special family members, Larry Hammons, Vickie Riggs, Randy Hammons, Andy Hammons, Kendra Braley, Angie Stuart, Caden Vaughn and Tim and Amanda Marshall; as well as many other nieces, nephews and other relatives. She was preceded in death by her father, Jerry McDole, died January 22, 1974, her mother, Margaret Alice Marshall McDole, died January 24, 1973, her husband of 58 years, Dallas Howard "Casey" Imel, died March 20, 2012, her brothers, Owen Silas McDole, died November 26, 1991, Archie R. McDole, died May 3, 2001, and George McDole, died March 18, 2010; her sisters, Lillian Bell Chandler, died January 12, 1996, Katherine Minnie Wentworth, died October 25, 1984, and Mildred L. Hammons, died October 3, 2003.

Grieving niece won't help herself

Dear Annie: I need help. I've let my niece move in with me, my husband and my 17-year-old daughter after her husband committed suicide. You see, she and her husband had issues for the last two years. They were both on drugs. I felt sorry for her after he passed. She has a sister and a 16-year-old son. Her son lives with his best friend and his family. My niece signed over custody to his mom, so she doesn't have many responsibilities. It's been almost three months since she moved in. She doesn't work. I pay for everything for her. She doesn't do anything. I cook, clean and do her laundry. She will go out with her friends and come back, but I know they've been partying. I don't know what to do. It's causing problems between me and my husband. I can't afford to take care of her. I don't know how to tell her she has to find a place to go. I feel like a bad aunt, but she doesn't want to help herself or anything. What should I do? — Agonizing Aunt off, please know you are absolutely not a "bad aunt." You opened your heart and your home to your niece after this unthinkable tragedy in her life and have shown her such compassion and understanding. As supportive as you sound and want to be for her, you cannot enable her to continue the behavior you've described. Though still grieving the loss of her husband, no doubt, your niece must start putting her life back in order for herself and for the benefit of her son. Let her know that to continue staying in your home, she must contribute like any other adult would — that means cleaning dishes, pitching in around the house, finding a job, paying rent and more. She also cannot under any circumstances use drugs under your roof nor should she outside the home if she wants to continue staying with you. Suggest that she speak with a therapist or grief counselor to work through the trauma of her late husband's death and seek help to heal from her years of substance use.

Dear Agonizing: First

Dear Annie: I appreciate your advice to "Fed Up" who was fed up with her mother-in-law's relationship with her husband's ex-wife.

Your advice was almost dead-on. My parents have been divorced for almost 30 years, but my paternal grandmother is still friends with my mother. My father recently asked me to tell my mother that it is no longer appropriate for her to maintain a relationship with his mother. I was very hurt. My maternal grandmother was my rock during my parents' divorce. She was the only one who had the balanced grace to do what was right for me, the kid in the middle of their mess. Even at the age of 38, hearing my dad ask me to destroy the last sense of family cohesion triggered deep-seated trauma for me. You are right. The relationship between mother-in-law and her grandchildren's mother shouldn't concern her, but further, the relationship probably holds down some sense of balance and family cohesion for her stepchildren. — Traumatized, Too

Dear Traumatized: Thank you for your letter and for sharing your perspective. I hope it serves to change how others may view this sort of relationship dynamic following a divorce. Ring or no ring, some bonds never break.

Chronic procrastination

Dear Annie: I am an 18-year-old girl living very far from you, but I recently read one of your columns and thought you might be able to help me. I am doing really well in my academics and was just accepted by one of the best engineering institutions in our country.

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Everyone around me is proud and happy. But something inside is pinching me. I broke up with my boyfriend last year, whom I loved with the core of my heart. He was my classmate. Eventually, he told me he loved me, too. However, after four years of this shy love, we finally got into a relationship that created some of the happiest moments of my life. And his life, too.

But a year later, we found ourselves in a complicated situation and decided to separate. Both of us are depressed, and it's been one year, and we are not able to move on. Neither of us wants to, yet I haven't talked to him for a long time. — Ms. Unforgettable

Dear Ms. Unforgettable: It sounds like neither of you can forget each other and both of you would be much happier together. At the very least, it sounds worth giving the relationship a second try. Pick up the phone and call him. Life is too short to worry about "what ifs." See if you can get back together. Best of luck to you.

Dear Annie: My husband is a chronic procrastinator. He puts off everything — from the small things, such as fixing a broken chair, to the really important stuff, such as making a will or getting a medical test. It's hard to schedule anything because he always waits until the last minute to decide what he wants to do.

Sometimes, I just have to wait because he won't be pushed to act or make a decision. Other times, I just have to act on my own. I've tried the gentle approach and the firm approach. Nothing works.

To be fair, he has a lot of good qualities. He is kind and loving, and he's a great cook. I don't expect perfection, but this problem affects not just me but whoever is waiting for an answer from him. That often involves friends and relatives, and it puts me in the middle. I realize that he may never change, but how do I live with this and achieve peace of mind? — Tired of Waiting

Dear Tired of Waiting: People often procrastinate because they are afraid they won't be able to complete the tasks at hand. Fear of failure promotes procrastination primarily when it reduces people's sense of autonomy or when they feel incapable of dealing with a task that they're afraid to fail at.

Don't bail him out with friends and family who are waiting for an answer. Direct them to ask him again, and tell him and them that you are not his timekeeper. He will then have to deal with the ramifications of his procrastinations.

In Indiana, there have now been 16,673 Hoosiers died from COVID-19 during the pandemic including 26 in the last day. The total of positive cases of COVID-19 now stands at 1,069,450 with 3,767 new cases in the last day. Indiana has vaccinated 52.5% of its eligible residents with Jefferson County's vaccination percentage now at 50.567% and Switzerland County's at 33.947%

On Thursday, Kentucky Gov. Andy Beshear encouraged Kentuckians to get a booster shot to help ward off another surge of coronavirus cases. As of Thursday, Indiana has had 654,900 state residents receive the booster dose of the vaccine. As of Wednesday, some 446,698 Kentuckians have had a booster shot.

"We have more tools approaching Thanksgiving than ever before, and more people eligible," Beshear said. "Make sure that when you sit down at that Thanksgiving table with the people you love, you have the highest level of immunity to protect them."

Kentucky recently joined other states in opening up booster shots to all adults despite federal recommendations that states limit doses to those considered most at risk.

Beshear signed an executive order Wednesday that made adults living and working in Kentucky eligible for a booster shot six months after their second dose of the Moderna or Pfizer COVID-19 vaccines, or two months after a single-dose Johnson & Johnson COVID-19 vaccine.

Beshear's announcement comes as Kentucky experiences a slight uptick in cases after weeks of decline: the number of total cases last week was higher than the previous two weeks. The state's test positivity rate has also risen to 6.18% from 5.51% last Thursday, furthering concerns about the waning immunity of COVID-19 vaccines.

"Waning immunity is real. We are seeing more people who've been vaccinated in the hospital, especially six months after their second shot," Beshear said.

Hospitals in Kentucky continue to be stressed by the plateau of new cases. For instance, eight of ten of the state's hospital regions have Intensive Care Unit capacity at or above 87%, with only 140 beds available statewide.

Kentucky reported 1,855 new coronavirus cases and 40 virus-related deaths Thursday. Roughly 27% of new cases were of new cases were school-age children. Kentucky's overall total of positive cases during the pandemic is now at 768,656 while the state's overall death total is now 10,394.

streets, is one of the only minority-owned businesses on Main Street in the Madison Historic District.

"Historic structures are some of the most powerful storytellers in Hoosier communities," Crouch said. "The preservation of historic properties is integral to retelling Indiana's history to future generations. This funding will help ensure communities can continue their Hoosier tradition and stories for years to come."

Eligible properties for the grant program must be at least 50 years old and either listed on the register of Indiana historic sites and structures, be listed or eligible for listing to the National Register of Historic Places, or be listed as a contributing resource in a National Register District.

Eligible applicants include non-profits, individuals, partnerships, firms, associations, joint ventures, limited liability companies, corporations or non-profit affordable housing organizations. Awarded properties will receive funding for the renovation and preservation of exterior features.

"These Historic Renovation Grant Program projects will make a lasting impact on their local communities and on our state," said OCRA Executive Director Denny Spinner. "These 11 properties will preserve the history of Indiana while supporting local economic development."

Other projects awarded funding ranged from a $100,000 grant to preserve the Odd Fellows Building in Salem to $26,400 for an exterior restoration of the birthplace of noted Indiana journalist Ernie Pyle and $100,000 to replace the roof at the Auburn Cord Duesenberg Automobile Museum.

"In its fifth year, the Historic Renovation Grant Program has transitioned to become a competitive grant program rather than first-come, first-served, to best support critical preservation efforts throughout the state," said Andrea Kern, OCRA director of strategic initiatives. "We are excited for the potential of these projects to continue a legacy throughout the state."

The Historic Renovation Grant Program received more than 50 applications with requests totaling over $3.2 million. Applications were scored based on appropriate historical criteria, extensive support from local residents, and the economic impact the project would have on the greater community.

once the new jail is in full operation, and they don't want to haphazardly provide a number. "They want to give us as much discount as they can because we will be using a large volume of water," Bramer added.

The issue is that Dupont Water Company provides water service to the north side of J.A. Berry Road — where the jail will be located — and Madison provides service to the south side of J.A. Berry Road. However, Madison has the capability to provide service to either side of the road and County Council members have expressed a preference of buying water for the new jail from Madison because they anticipate buying from Dupont will cost the county more since Dupont buys its water from Madison.

Bramer said Dupont Water Company sent a letter in early January threatening possible legal action if the county doesn't purchase the jail's water from Dupont, and cited a case in Jennings County in which a group was sued after trying to buy water from a different water company.

"I know there's concern and we're trying to work through it," Bramer said, noting the issue is not urgent and does not have to be resolved immediately. He said the construction site has all the water it currently needs for work to continue "so it's not like we're holding anything up for the construction."

Meanwhile, Bramer said progress is being made on construction of the new jail. He said the foundations are nearly complete, and cameras soon will be placed on the jail site to provide a live feed going to the county's website so that people can watch the work being done. The video provides security to the site, but makes it to where "everybody else can keep up with what's going on," Bramer said.

• Troy Morgan, director of the Jefferson County Emergency Management Agency, provided an update on a proposed storage building for EMA and the health department. Morgan said he was encouraged at the last County Council meeting to move forward in investigating the project, and determining what zoning issues might be required to locate a structure adjacent to the health department at 715 Green Road.

He said he met with Nicole M. Schell, director of planning for the City of Madison, and was told the structure would be considered a medical/health facility. Morgan noted he is not knowledgeable enough about zoning requirements to fully respond to that aspect of the building, and asked for assistance from Josh Cline, the county's building and zoning inspector.

• Erica Cline, county archivist and grant writer, said feedback is being sought from the Office of Community and Rural Affairs on a planning grant sought by the Rykers' Ridge Water Company to evaluate a discrepancy in water usage and determine a solution. Cline said Rykers' Ridge currently purchases more water than is being used by its customers.

"They need a plan to address whether the meter is not reading correctly, whether it's actually leaking somewhere" or some other reason, Cline said. She added there have been changes to OCRA's requirements and eligibility, and efforts are being made to determine what must be done to seek the planning grant for the project.

• Commissioner Ron Lee provide an update that the next meeting to discuss the possibility of creating a local substance abuse facility will be

4 p.m. on Thursday, Dec. 2, at the Jefferson County Public Safety Center. Bramer noted that discussions with Barnes and

Thornburg LLP, the firm retained by the county for advise on the American Rescue Plan, have indicated that mental health and substance abuse would be eligible for American Rescue Plan funding, particularly if used as matching dollars for other grants.

Tax Loss Harvesting

"For many investors, tax-loss harvesting is one of the most useful tools for reducing capital gains taxes." Steve Dybwad

Layin It On The Line

By Stephen Dybwad
Retirement Planning/
Wealth Management

What is tax-loss harvesting and will it work for you?

When securities and certain other assets such as real estate, are sold at a loss to offset a capital gains tax liability, the process is known as "tax-loss harvesting," or "tax-loss" selling. Typically, investors use tax-loss harvesting to limit the recognition of short-term capital gains.

How tax-loss harvesting works. Even in a bull market, veteran investors may find that have added a few losers to their portfolios. Tax-loss harvesting may be able to lessen the pain of those stinkers by giving you the ability to use those losses to lower your tax liability. Your portfolio will then be better positioned in the future.

A tax-harvesting strategy usually works something like this:

Imagine you bought a shiny new tech stock that is now declining. You decide to sell that underperforming asset at a loss to stop the drain on your portfolio. You then take that loss and use it to reduce your taxable income gains. Potentially, you could offset up to $3,000 in ordinary income. Finally, you might reinvest the money from the sale into a different asset that better meets your needs.

Here's an example of how this could work for a typical investment. Say you have a recognized gain of $10,000 on a stock purchase you made six months ago. Since you had that stock less than a year, the gain is treated by the IRS as a "short-term" capital gain. Short-term gains are, as you may know, taxed at significantly higher "ordinary income" rates than investments that are held for a year or more.

At around the same time, you decide to sell off shares of an underperforming stock that is draining your portfolio. You sell that asset at a loss of $20,000. Your $20,000 loss would offset the entire $10,000 gain from the first stock purchase, meaning you won't owe taxes. You could use the remaining $10,000 of the loss to offset $3,000 of your ordinary income. Anything leftover could be carried forward to offset your income in the future.

Some things to consider. If you are thinking of using a tax-loss harvesting strategy, there are some things of which you must be aware.

The IRS allows you to use investment losses to offset taxes on your ordinary income. This means that even if you have no capital gains, tax-loss harvesting could be useful in reducing your taxes.

You cannot deduct losses in a retirement account, such as a 401k or IRA. There are restrictions on how you use specific types of losses to offset certain gains.

Something called the "wash-sale rule" prevents you from getting a tax deduction for any security sold in a wash sale as defined by the IRS. Generally, it's considered a wash sale when you sell or trade a security at a loss, and within 30 days before or after that sale, you buy what the IRS defines as a "substantially identical" stock or security.

Tax-loss harvesting is most often implemented at the end of the year, but it can also be done at any time during a tax year.

If you earn less than $40,000 as a single-filer or $80,000 as joint filers, you won't owe anything on your long-term capital gains. So, tax-harvesting provides no benefits to you.

Summing it up: Tax-loss harvesting regularly and proactively can help many individuals, especially those in higher tax brackets. Using this strategy, you may be able to realize losses and use proceeds from the sale to purchase other securities or safe money products, such as annuities. However, there are many rules, regulations, and pitfalls that you must understand before undertaking a tax loss harvest. You must also consult a tax professional to ensure that your tax-loss harvesting strategy is correctly designed and executed.

Holcroft, Konkle to perform at Disney World

Madison trio
earn cheerleading
All-America honors

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Two Madison Consolidated High School cheerleaders have earned the experience of a lifetime this weekend when they compete in the Universal Cheerleaders Association Varsity Spectacular at Walt Disney World in Orlando.

Seniors Alli Holcroft and Lily Konkle, as well as junior Jayme Lee, each earned UCA All-American honors after a tryout in July. As part of the All-American team, the trio gets a chance to compete in events all over the country, starting this weekend.

Lee was unable to make the trip but Holcroft and Konkle have already flown to Florida and will be in action on Saturday.

“We’ve had girls selected in the past but this is the first time girls have actually been able to go to one of the events,” Madison coach Hannah Oliver said. “So it’s really cool that they’re going to travel down there and represent our school for the first time.”

The journey from camper to All-American wasn’t easy. The Madison cheerleaders had been selected by UCA staff at a camp for the opportunity to tryout. Once at the tryout, they had to perform in front of the camp.

Submitted Photo

“It means they had really sharp motions, that they learned the routine, that they have superior jumps, and they perform these in front of everyone at the camp,” Oliver said. “It’s really exciting with everybody cheering them on. So it’s an honor to be chosen and even more exciting for them to be able to go down there.”

Preparing for the Orlando trip has been nearly a full-time quest. Both Holcroft and Konkle have been busy learning their routines without the benefit of working with the rest of a group. Once in Orlando, they will parade through the park doing different routines.

Neither Konkle nor Holcroft know where they will be in the parade. As a result, they have had to learn several different aspects of the routine.

“You have to learn your choreography on your own. And then there is stuff you have to learn on the fly,” Konkle said. “You actually have to learn multiple different routines, because you have to learn different ripples and different counts. When we get there, they’ll put us in a place. And then say you have to do this ripple. So you have to know all the ripples, just in case.”

“You could be anywhere and you could be in the very back or you could be in the very front, you have no idea,” Holcroft said. “When you get there, they decide where you’re at by performing in front of producers. So it’s almost like an audition once you get there.”

As if learning the routine wasn’t hard enough, the two were also in the process of practicing their annual Turkey

Shootout routine with their counterparts from Southwestern before flying out on Wednesday.

“Really, it’s just like mental because you have to know that routine, like perfectly, so I think I’m just gonna get it down really and just like drill it in my brain,” Holcroft said. “It’s probably gonna involve going over it in my head over and over.”

The Varsity Spectacular actually runs through Tuesday and while Holcroft plans to stay for the entire event, Konkle will come home Sunday so she can be a part of the junior varsity Turkey Shootout on Monday.

Both girls have explored the possibility of cheering in college but neither has decided anything yet. So while they have the high school basketball season ahead of them, Saturday’s event could be their last final hurrah. Either way, Oliver is thrilled to see them have the chance to represent their school.

“One of the things we’ve been working on, since I’ve been here, is trying to get the girls more recognized and trying to get them to work harder so that people recognize us as athletes,” Oliver said. “I think this will be an opportunity to kind of showcase that and show that it’s not an easy thing that they’re doing and then hopefully it’ll promote more girls to try out and hopefully send more girls in the future.”

Hanover men’s soccer ready to square off against Messiah in NCAA Sweet 16

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Hanover men’s soccer will make its first-ever appearance in the NCAA Division III Tournament’s Round of Sixteen when the Panthers square off against eighth-ranked Messiah today in Lexington, Virginia.

The Panthers are just the fourth Hanover team overall to advance this deep into the national tournament, joining three men’s basketball teams. Only the 2017 men’s basketball squad has gone beyond this round.

“If you’ve ever really felt alive, that’s what it felt like this past weekend,” Hanover coach Matt Wilkerson said. “I just enjoyed watching our guys accomplish something that has never been accomplished. And the way they did it. They represented themselves, our school and hundreds of people that have played here before. It’s been a brick-by-brick process and fortunately the guys before this built a great foundation of bricks and we were able to build off of it.”

Hanover had a terrific regular season, going 13-4-1, but has been in must-win mode since the postseason started. As the No.

2 seed in the Heartland Collegiate Athletic Conference, the Panthers knew they had to win the league tournament in order to get into the Big Dance and they did so by beating Bluffton 4-2 in the semifinals then knocking off Defiance in a penalty-kick shootout for the conference championship.

“Every game is difficult to win and we don’t take that for granted. Defiance was hot and playing well and they pushed us probably as far as you can be pushed,” Wilkerson said.

Hanover used that momentum to win their first two NCAA Tournament games this past weekend in Atlanta. The Panthers scored two goals late —

Hanover men whip Spalding 82-56 in home opener

BY JORDAN BEAR

The official home opener for Hanover College men’s basketball couldn’t have gone any better as the Panthers cruised to an 82-56 win over Spalding on Wednesday night at Collier Arena.

A very athletic and big Golden Eagles team came out and scored the first three baskets of the game but the rest of the night belonged to Hanover as the Panthers cruised to victory.

The teams exchanged leads multiple times early in the first half before Hanover took the lead for good and built a 12-point cushion at halftime. The second half was never in doubt as Hanover continued to click offensively from all parts of the court en route to the win.

Hanover shot a blistering 56% from the field, but perhaps even more impressive was the fact that the Panthers had 28 assists on 34 made shots. They also took care of the ball with only six turnovers.

“I think some people may read that number and think we’re paying off the stat crew,” joked Hanover coach Jon Miller. “That’s a really high number but our team just looked really good on the offensive end of the floor. We had several possessions where we moved the ball extremely well, looked for our open shot, made the extra pass and were very unselfish with our ball movement.”

Spalding made most of its noise in the paint by continuously feeding its big man, Hanover transfer Christian Stewart. The 6-foot-5 junior from Clarksville led the Eagles with 19 points.

Miller said defense is something the team still needs to work on going forward.

“Give Spalding credit, they got the ball in the paint and really pushed hard,” Miller said. “We have to do a better job of keeping teams out of the lane. We have to do better in guarding those players who play 15 feet away from the basket. So still a few small things that we need to work on.”

One of the highlights in the game for Miller and local fans came when former Madison Cub Luke Miller, who is coach Miller’s son, scored his first collegiate points on a 3-pointer late in the contest. The freshman also pulled down two rebounds.

“Yeah he got one to go down there,” Miller said of his son. “He got a great pass from Coleman Sater on the play. Made a great play in the lane, was unselfish and found Luke open. Yes it was a very cool thing to see Luke knock one down.”

Hanover was led in scoring by junior Ty Houston with 20 points while sophomore Matt Munoz scored 14.

Hanover, now 2-0, will be back at home Tuesday when it hosts a strong Wittenberg team at Collier Arena.

Rays OF Arozarena, Reds 2B India earn Rookie of Year honors

BY DAVID BRANDT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

It didn’t feel like Randy Arozarena was a rookie this season.

Tampa Bay’s speedy and powerful outfielder certainly didn’t play like one, either.

Arozarena won AL Rookie of the Year honors with a superb follow-up to his 2020 postseason heroics while Cincinnati Reds second baseman Jonathan India earned NL Rookie of the Year on Monday night.

The standout years for Arozarena and India highlight the changing profile of a good MLB leadoff hitter. Both players have speed and a good eye, but also considerable power. It’s the first time since 1953 that the rookie of the year winners were both primarily leadoff hitters. That season, Detroit’s Harvey Kuenn and Brooklyn’s

Randy Arozarena

Jonathan India

Jim Gilliam won.

If it didn’t seem like this wasn’t Arozarena’s first year, there’s a reason. The 26-year-old Cuban provided a stunning lift for the Rays during the 2020 postseason with 10 homers in 18 games during their run to the World Series.

But Arozarena didn’t play enough during the 2020 regular season to lose his rookie status so he was eligible for the award this year. He followed up his postseason breakout with an excellent season in 2021, finishing with a .274 average, 32 doubles, 20 homers, 20 stolen bases and 69 RBIs while adding excellent defense, helping the Rays return to the postseason.

“I know I was favored to be the rookie of the year,”

Bengals, Raiders looking to reverse recent slides

BY JOSH DUBOW
AP PRO FOOTBALL WRITER

Just a few weeks ago the Cincinnati Bengals and Las Vegas Raiders found themselves in surprising spots, tied at the top of the AFC standings.

The two perennial also-rans had both gotten off to 5-2 starts that offered promise that a long-awaited breakthrough could be in the cards.

But headed into their meeting on Sunday in Las Vegas, both the Bengals (5-4) and Raiders (5-4) have reverted to their recent form with back-to-back losses that have put serious dents into their playoff hopes.

“Things are not going to get easier, they’re going to get harder these last eight games,” Bengals coach Zac Taylor said. “You know, about everybody in the league right now is 5-4 or 5-5. We’re right there in the middle of it, so we’re going to take care of business starting this week on the road in Las Vegas.”

The Bengals are coming off their bye, following losses to the Jets and Browns the previous two weeks. The Raiders’ slide started following their bye week as they have lost to the Giants and Chiefs.

But despite the recent slumps, both the Bengals and Raiders remain in contention in a tight conference that features seven teams with five wins, four more with six and only Tennessee (8-2) having created any space with the competition. “You see it all throughout the league, especially like the last two weeks. Teams not having weeks they are used to having or teams beating teams that usually wouldn’t beat them,” Raiders quarterback Derek Carr said.

“We saw it all the last two weeks. It’s been really weird actually, but what it’s done is it’s really kept everything close, and we’ll see what happens. We got to go earn it. We got to go prove it. It’s not what we want, but we definitely have the guys in the room to be able to do it.”

SLOW STARTS

One issue that has plagued the Raiders all season has been slow starts. Las Vegas has fallen behind by double digits five times in the first half this season, tied for the second most for any team. The Raiders managed to climb out of those holes and win back in Weeks 1 and 3 against Baltimore and Miami, but haven’t the past three times.

“I think both sides of the ball we talk about starting fast and finish faster,” interim coach Rich Bisaccia said. “Everyone has different vernacular but that’s kind of how we talk about it, that’s what we preach to our team. In the games we’ve started fast, we’ve been in a position to have a chance to win them in the end. In the games we haven’t, lately we’re struggling getting ourselves back in the game in the fourth quarter.”

REVOLVING GUARDS

Right guard has been a trouble spot for the Bengals and a bit of a revolving door. The opening day starter, Xavier Su’a-Filo, was injured in Week 2. Rookie Jackson Carman has been in and out of the job. Fellow rookie Troy Hill got a start when Carman was out but didn’t stick. Hakeem Adeniji came off injured reserve and got the start in the loss to Cleveland. Taylor said Adeniji earned another chance and is expected to get the nod for the Raiders game.

GROUNDING

The Raiders’ running game showed some promise with back-to-back games with more than 100 yards before getting stuffed last week against Kansas City. Las Vegas was held to 50 yards on 16 carries with halfbacks Josh Jacobs (7 for 16) and Kenyan Drake (4 for 16) getting little traction. The Raiders rank in the bottom five in yards rushing per game (85) and yards per carry (3.7).

THIN AT LINEBACKER

Linebackers were exploited in the Bengals’ past two losses. They were out of position on screens and underneath passes and missed on some big plays. Now Akeem Davis-Gaither (foot) and Jordan Evans (knee) have landed on injured reserve, so depth is going to be an issue.

Markus Bailey is off the COVID-19 list and the Bengals hope he will be ready for Sunday. The situation also turns up the pressure on outside linebacker Logan Wilson and middle linebacker Germaine Pratt, whose strength is not pass coverage.

Grant, Joseph lead Pistons to 97-89 comeback win over Pacers

BY DAVE HOGG
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DETROIT — Jeremi Grant scored 19 points, Cory Joseph added 18 and the Detroit Pistons rallied to beat the Indiana Pacers 97-89 on Wednesday night.

“This is the way we have to play,” Grant said. “We have a lot of length in our lineup, and we need to be active defensively, get stops and get out to run.”

Rookie guard Cade Cunningham added 16 points for Detroit (4-10), and Saddiq Bey scored 15.

“Cade is getting better each and every day, and he’s already becoming a leader,” Joseph said. “When he’s at the point, it is like we have another coach on the floor.”

Malcolm Brogdan had 19 points for Indiana (6-10). Caris LeVert scored 18, and Domantas Sabonis finished with 15 points and 10 rebounds.

“This is a tough loss, because (the Pistons) really dominated the play,” Pacers coach Rick Carlisle said. “They were clearly the aggressors from the start, and we didn’t raise our game to match it. That’s a recipe for losing in the NBA.”

Both teams shot below 43% from the floor and under 30% on 3-pointers.

“We told our guys that we have to be able to win games when we aren’t making baskets,” Pistons coach Dwane Casey said. “The way we shoot, we have to be able to do other things.”

The score was tied going into the fourth quarter, but Indiana got to the basket on its first three possessions to go ahead 79-73. The Pacers, though, couldn’t hit enough jumpers to take control of the game, and then Sabonis missed three straight free throws.

Detroit went ahead 85-82 on Joseph’s 3-pointer with 5:46 left, and Cunningham followed with a layup in traffic.

Indiana got as close as two, but Grant’s jumper made it 94-88 with 1:01 to play.

“We’re such a young team that it isn’t easy to play hard and play smart in the same game,” Joseph said. “We played hard all night, but there were a few times we didn’t make good plays. We knew we had to stay focused in the fourth quarter — that’s how we won the game.”

The Pistons led 49-41 at halftime, aided by 17 points off 14 Pacers turnovers.

“The turnovers obviously killed us,” Brogdan said. “That’s on me and it has to get better.”

Joseph had 10 points in 13 minutes with the second unit, while Brogdan had 14 of the 27 points scored by the Indiana starters.

Detroit quickly increased the lead to 11 in the third quarter, but LeVert and Sabonis combined for 18 points in seven minutes as Indiana tied the game at 59.

“We had a very good third quarter and then we did some great things to build the six-point lead,” Carlisle said. “But then we gave up some easy dribble penetration, had some bad offensive possessions, and the game got away from us.”

TIP-INS

Pacers: SG Chris Duarte (shoulder soreness) missed his second straight game. The rookie started Indiana’s first 14 games, averaging 14.3 points. ... The Pacers swept their three games against Detroit last year.

Pistons: Bey hit his 200th career 3-pointer in his 84th game, matching the third-fewest games for any NBA player. Duncan Robinson did it in 69 games, Anthony Edwards took 82 games and Donovan Mitchell also did it in 84.

Colts travel to face Bills in 2020 playoff rematch

BY JOHN WAWROW
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Difficult as it was for Frank Reich to open the week being reminded of how Indianapolis fell short in its most recent trip to Buffalo, the Colts coach also found reason for optimism.

“I’m not going to lie. It was painful to watch that game on tape again ... but yet it was also encouraging,” Reich said, referring to a 27-24 loss to the Bills in an AFC wild-card playoff in January.

What also stood was how the Colts were one of any several plays away from a chance at victory. The potential turning points included getting stopped four times inside Buffalo’s 4, defensive end Kemoko Turay jumping offside on fourth down to extend an eventual Bills touchdown drive, and Rodrigo Blankenship banking a 33-yard field goal attempt off the right upright.

“We know there’s no consolation prize. But at the same time, I feel like it was a great effort by our team,” Reich added. “I feel like we’re a better team this year.”

That remains to be seen as the Colts (5-5) travel to face the Bills (6-3) on Sunday (TV: Live on CBS at 1 p.m.) with questions still unanswered as to how good either team might be.

While the Colts have rebounded from a 1-4 start to win four of five, they’re 0-5 against opponents who made the playoffs last year.

The Bills, meantime, have padded their record by beating opponents entering Week 11 with a combined 18-39 record. By comparison, they’ve lost to Tennessee (8-2), Pittsburgh (5-3-1) and Jacksonville (2-7).

With Buffalo’s AFC East lead down to a half-game over New England (6-4), the team enters the meat of its schedule with its next six opponents currently .500 or better.

The hope is carrying over momentum from a 45-17 rout of the New York Jets. Buffalo’s offense shed its inconsistencies by scoring a season high in points, and a resurgent defense forced five takeaways for a second time this year.

“We can go wherever we want, but we just have to focus on us,” left tackle Dion Dawkins said. “We are the only people that can stop us from going where we want to go, and that’s just to say that we are our biggest opponent.”

While the defense has been stout, Buffalo’s Josh Allen-led offense has under-delivered despite scoring 280 points, the second-most in the NFL behind Arizona, which has played one more game.

What’s missing are fourth-quarter comebacks with all three of Buffalo’s losses decided by seven points or less.

The Colts have also had difficulty finishing, with two of their losses decided in overtime, and outscored by a combined 96-62 in the fourth quarter. In a 23-17 win over Jacksonville last weekend, the Colts nearly squandered a 20-6 fourth-quarter lead before the Dayo Odeyingbo and DeForest Buckner sealed the victory with a strip-sack of Trevor Lawrence at mid-field with a minute left.

The win is all that mattered to quarterback Carson Wentz, with Indy back in the playoff picture.

“At the end of the day, we’re heading into late November and December here and we’re sitting at .500,” Wentz said. “We would love to say it could’ve looked different. All of that kind of goes out the window. It’s pretty wide open.”

FOR THE RECORD

Colts running back Jonathan Taylor needs 1 yard rushing to break a tie with two-time NFL rushing champ Derrick Henry to take the league lead. But the second-year running back is chasing a bigger milestone.

He has scored at least one TD and topped 100 yards from scrimmage in seven consecutive games. It’s the NFL’s third-longest streak, and one game behind former Colts running back Lydell Mitchell and former Chargers star LaDainian Tomlinson.

NO JOSHING

Reich is a former Bills backup to Jim Kelly, and recalled texting the Hall of Famer when Buffalo drafted Allen in 2018.

“Oooh, this feel like it could be the right guy to put our old team back on the map offensively,” he recalled.

Reich’s outlook hasn’t changed.

“I love watching guys develop at the quarterback position. I don’t like playing against them,” he said, referring to Allen. “I have a lot of respect for what he’s done and how he’s done it.”

IN RESPONSE

Allen was humbled when informed of Reich’s assessment, and well aware of the former backup’s place in Bills history.

Reich led Buffalo to overcome a 32-point deficit — the largest in NFL history — in a 41-38 overtime victory over the Houston Oilers in an AFC wild-card playoff during the 1992 season.

“To hear that come from him, it’s pretty cool,” Allen said. “But that doesn’t change my feelings on Sunday.”

Purdue dominates middle to take down Wright State

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WEST LAFAYETTE — Purdue forward Trevion Williams used a milestone moment to show off all of his skills Tuesday night.

He delivered the usual highlight dunks, strong rebounds and jarring screens. He also made a nifty behind-the-back pass, took a defender off the dribble, showed he could hit some jumpers and even threw in a couple of dance moves as he celebrated.

Williams finished with 20 points and 13 rebounds, helping the sixth-ranked Boilermakers blow out Wright State 96-52 on a night he became the 16th player in school history with 1,000 points and 650 rebounds.

“That was never my mindset,” Williams said. “I just wanted to be a part of something special, I wanted to win. But I knew I couldn’t do that without making some sacrifices and getting my body in shape.”

By trimming weight and working on his athleticism, the preseason All-American has become one of the nation’s most challenging matchups though he’s been coming off the bench this season.

And with 7-foot-4 center Zach Edey and 6-10 true freshman Caleb Furst also playing well, the Boilermakers have exploited an even bigger advantage in the post than they have over the last decade. So far, nobody has found a solution for Purdue’s big three, certainly not the undermanned Raiders (1-2).

Edey had 18 points and 12 rebounds while Furst added 14 points and 10 rebounds. Purdue is off to its first 3-0 start in three seasons and shot better than 50% for the third straight game, its longest streak since December 2000.

The defending Horizon League regular-season champs were led by Trey Calvin with 21 points and Tanner Holden with 17. But any chance they had of staying close evaporated quickly with Edey and Williams patrolling the middle.

“It’s a good team from the perimeter, a good team inside. I think a lot of teams are going to struggle to stop them this year,” Wright State coach Scott Nagy said.

Edey helped Purdue take control quickly by breaking to a 14-3 lead. Then Williams got going with back-to-back three-point plays and Edey’s layup capped a 14-0 run that extended the margin to 33-10.

Wright State never recovered. It gave up the final eight points of the first half, falling into a 51-17 deficit and trailed by as much as 49.

“You get Zach Edey beating on you for four or five minutes and you want a break and then here comes Trevion,” coach Matt Painter said. “He (Williams) was so good finishing games for us last year. He’s just been great for us this year.”

Jackson Davis scores 18 as Indiana battles past St. John's

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
BLOOMINGTON — Trayce Jackson-Davis scored 18 points, grabbed 10 rebounds and blocked two shots as Indiana fended off a relentless charge by St. John's 76-74 Wednesday night in the Gavitt Games, a series pitting the Big Ten against the Big East.

The Red Storm (2-1) were visiting Indiana's Assembly Hall for the first time in 29 years and made it memorable, remorselessly whittling a 14-point first-half deficit down to a chance to win at the buzzer.

Julian Champagnie scored 32 points for St. John's, 22 in the second-half comeback, but his 3-pointer for the game didn't fall and the Hoosiers Jordan Geronimo controlled the rebound as time expired.

Race Thompson added 15 points with four steals for Indiana (3-0), Miller Kopp scored 12 and blocked three shots while Tamar Bates added 11 points off the bench.

Stef Smith added 16 points and three steals for the Red Storm while Posh Alexander scored 10 points, made six assists with six rebounds and two steals.

Alexander drew St. John's into a 56-56 tie with 8:49 to go and the Red Storm came within one point four times in the last four minutes.

Indiana had an answer each time.

Northwestern, Purdue collide with Wrigley adding intrigue

BY ANDREW SELIGMAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS
CHICAGO — Pat Fitzgerald remembers the party-like atmosphere and the unusual circumstances the last time Northwestern played at Wrigley Field. It sure was an unforgettable experience.

"I might call it unique," Fitzgerald said.

Northwestern is set to host Purdue (TV: Live on Big Ten at noon) at the Friendly Confines on Saturday, exactly 11 years after the one-way game between the Wildcats and Illinois at the famed old ballpark.

The in-state rivals were looking for extra publicity when they met in 2010. And did they ever get it.

In the first football game at Wrigley Field since the NFL's Chicago Bears left for Soldier Field following the 1970 season — and the first college matchup there since DePaul faced St. Louis in 1938 — Illinois ran away from Northwestern 48-27 behind Mikel Leshoure's school-record 330 yards rushing. But what really stood out was a wacky twist brought on by safety concerns about the setup in a stadium known for its quirks.

The two teams agreed late that week the offenses would only run plays toward the end zone near the third-base dugout because the other one came within about a foot of the heavily padded brick wall in right field. That meant the ball was repositioned after changes of possession. The only touchdown scored in the right-field end zone was on an interception return by Northwestern.

Things will be different this time.

The ballpark underwent a massive renovation that allows the third-base dugout top and seats along the left-field line to be removed, creating more room for a football field. That puts both end zones in use for the first college game at Wrigley since Northwestern met Illinois, though the two teams will be on the same sideline.

The Wildcats were scheduled to face Wisconsin at Wrigley last season as part of an agreement in 2013 with baseball's Chicago Cubs to play five games on the North Side. That was moved to Ryan Field because of the pandemic.

The setting figures to add some juice to the matchup between Northwestern (3-7, 1-6 Big Ten) and Purdue (6-4, 4-3). The 86th game in a series dating to 1895 will be just the second not played in Evanston, Illinois, or West Lafayette, Indiana; the other was at Soldier Field in 1931.

"I think there's extra excitement for the fans, people that want to go to Wrigley," Purdue coach Jeff Brohm said. "That's awesome. It's an historic, great venue. As far as our football team, they want to win."

BOUNCE BACK

The Boilermakers gave up five touchdown passes in a 59-31 loss at No. 6 Ohio State last week after beating No. 5 Michigan State the previous game — their second win this season over a top-five team. They allowed 45 points in the first half against the Buckeyes after holding opponents to 30 points or less in their first nine games.

Northwestern comes in with four straight losses following a 35-7 romp at Wisconsin last week.

ON TARGET

When it comes to accuracy, Purdue's Aidan O'Connell is tops in the Big Ten. He leads the conference and ranks fifth in the nation in completion percentage (72.4).

Tshiebwe's 24 points, 16 boards lead No. 13 Kentucky over MSM

BY GARY B. GRAVES
ASSOCIATED PRESS
LEXINGTON— Oscar Tshiebwe's rebounding drew so much attention that his offense was something of an afterthought.

That focus might change after the Kentucky forward showed a skill that was there all along.

Tshiebwe had a career-high 24 points with 16 rebounds, TyTy Washington scored 16 points and No. 13 Kentucky shot well for the second consecutive game to run away from Mount St. Mary's 80-55 on Tuesday night.

Sahvir Wheeler added 12 points and eight assists as the Wildcats (2-1) made 34 of 64 from the field (53%) a few days after hitting 57% in a 100-60 rout of Robert Morris.

Leading 38-27 at halftime, Kentucky broke away with a 23-5 run over 6:40 for a 61-32 cushion that grew to 31 with 7:24 remaining.

Tshiebwe helped set the tone with contributions on both ends on the way to his third double-double to start the season. The West Virginia transfer — who came in averaging 20 boards per game — continued his strong rebounding and also made short and mid-range jumpers to finish 11 of 14 from the field and top his previous best of 21 points against Boston University on Nov. 22, 2019.

"I told you all that he can shoot the ball," Kentucky coach John Calipari said of the 6-foot-9 player. "He's one of our best 15-, 17-foot shooters. ... So, we put in some stuff for him to shoot jumpers."

Tshiebwe took off from there, becoming the first Kentucky player with three consecutive double-doubles since PJ Washington in early 2019. Julius Randle achieved that feat over his first seven games in the 2013-14 season.

"If a big man is staying down there (in the lane), I know I've got to shoot," he said. "Most of the bigs I'm going to play, I believe they're not going to be fast like me. That is a large advantage for me."

UK aims to extend non-league streak vs. New Mexico State

BY GARY B. GRAVES
ASSOCIATED PRESS
LEXINGTON — Kentucky coach Mark Stoops hopes his team maintains its winning ways against nonconference opponents.

The Wildcats (7-3) enter Saturday's matchup against New Mexico State (1-9) riding a 14-game winning streak in non-league games (TV: Live on SECN at noon). They're 36.5-point favorites against the Aggies according to FanDuel.com, and Stoops wants players to stay focused on closing as strong as possible now that the Southeastern Conference grind is behind them.

"I really challenged them to continue to push, continue to focus on the little things," Stoops said this week. "We still have a lot of inexperience and we're just pushing these players to get better as the season goes on."

The Wildcats are coming off a 34-17 victory at Vanderbilt that ended a three-game skid. The win clinched a 5-3 SEC finish and second place in the Eastern Division for the first time since their remarkable 2018 season that ended 10-3 with a Citrus Bowl win.

A nine-win regular season is still within reach for Kentucky, and the goal is continuing what worked in Nashville against NMSU. The Wildcats rolled up 413 yards of offense and got a 31-yard interception return for a touchdown by sophomore safety Jalen Geiger to build a 31-3 halftime cushion.

New Mexico State will face its second consecutive SEC opponent after getting thumped 59-3 last week at No. 2 Alabama.

The Aggies, an independent FBS program that will join Conference USA in 2023-24, have lost six consecutive games. They were outgained 587-138 last week by the Crimson Tide with Ethan Albertson's early 50-yard field goal providing their only points before Alabama scored the rest.

New Mexico State coach Doug Martin expects a similar challenge from Kentucky, especially defensively.

"You turn on (video of) some people and defensively they're good because they have great athletes, and Kentucky has that," said Martin, who played quarterback at Kentucky from 1981-84.

"You turn on other people and look at the film and it jumps out at you that they're really well coached. That's what you see when you game plan against Kentucky."

SENIORS HONORED

Kentucky will recognize 22 seniors before the game on Saturday, many of whom were part of the 2018 squad that won the first of three consecutive bowl games. The roster includes "super seniors" such as receiver Josh Ali, offensive lineman Luke Fortner and tight end Justin Rigg, who were honored last year before returning with an extra year of eligibility because of the coronavirus pandemic.

"Everything that I got last year was awesome, not knowing that I was going to come back," Rigg said. "To get an opportunity to celebrate with another senior class and do it again is really special."

VERSATILE JOHNSON

Aggies senior quarterback Jonah Johnson ranks 53rd nationally with 2,104 yards passing and eight touchdowns. He has completed 58% of his attempts and leads the team with 113 rushing attempts for 107 yards and four TDs. Johnson ranks second in rushing yards to Juvaun Price (485, six TDs).

1,000-YARD CLUB

Kentucky junior Chris Rodriguez Jr. last week became the program's 10th running back to rush for 1,000 yards in a season. He has surpassed 100 yards each of the past two games and ranks second among SEC rushers with 1,032 yards.
